Our contemporary being on the spot is of course in a better position than we are to gauge po pular feeling in respect of the railway, but we believe there has been no general hostility evinced towards it, and it is a fact that not ong ago a petition was presented by the Negotiation, were in progress which might lead to the formation of an exploration company, and possibly also to the establishment of a bank in North Borneo; and there was now a greater prospect than bitherto of the country being more thoroughly explored, and in the near future. A great stop had been taken in the past year in the facilities for communication. There was now direct fortnightly communication with Hongkong, and several stermers were running to and fro between Sandakan, Sulu, and the norts. Great progress had also been made in immigration and the supply of Indone for the planters, He was glad to say that their parts had had frequent visits by her Majosty's ships of war, the influence of which was very acceptable as evidence of the interest of her Majesty's Government in the progress of the protected State.
